In an effort to improve its methods and evaluate the University’s compost and recycling programs, Landscape Service’s Hardscape team conducted a comprehensive waste audit in early 2012. Three full sorts were completed to cover the main types of waste found on campus: Residential, Commercial, and Food Service. Findings indicate that the opportunity exists for Northwest to eventually achieve an 80-90% campus waste diversion rate; also shedding some light on the viability of maintaining current recyclables sorting efforts and identifying additional opportunities to improve our collection and recovery processes.
