PROFESSION-BASED LEARNING EXPERIENCES

Knacktive combines six disciplines (computer science, English, art, marketing, mass media and public relations) into a semester-long interactive and collaborative course. Teams of students conduct market research, analyze data, write creative strategies, and develop an integrated, digital marketing communication campaign and promotional materials for a real-world client.

At the end of each course, teams pitch their ideas to convince the client to implement their plans. The experience prepares students for careers with digital marketing and advertising agencies who are competing for clients.

Past Knacktive include LasikPlus Vision, Science City at Kansas City's Union Station, Tri-State Ford, Horace Mann Laboratory School, DecisionFx and Hy-Vee

Internships are required with this major. Northwest offers many on-campus internships in addition to opportunities to network and gain internships with regional and nationally known agencies. Northwest public relations students have landed internships at agencies and organizations including:
